Sandra Carter. Don was my son and losing him has been the most horrible thing in my life. He was married four times, never finding anyone that made him happy. Three years ago he found the true love of his life. Unfortunately by the time that they met his health was not something that he was able to recover from and God called him home. His fiancée Renee made the rest of his life the happiest time of his life, he finally found a woman who showed him what being loved really was. As his mother, no other female that he was with was as good to my son, and for that I appreciate and love her. My life was worth while because I had him for my SON. I just wish God had given me a little more time with him. I have always heard that God takes the BEST and he was the BEST. Rest in peace Don, you deserve it. I feel that you are still here around me, I cherish every each and every second that I feel you near. A better son did not exist because God gave that to me. In love you North, South, East, and West all around the world sweetie. Love you s o o o much. Mom
